ORVAL

The legend behind the name Orval and its famous signature label purports to a young widow who lost her wedding ring in a spring. After praying for its return a trout appeared from the water with the ring in its mouth. She exclaimed "Truly this place is a Val D'Or" (golden valley), from which the name Orval is derived. In her gratitude she pledged funds towards the building of the monastery on those grounds.

ROCHEFORT

The brewery is located inside the Abbey of Notre-Dame de Saint-Rémy, near the town of Rochefort, and has been brewing beer since 1595. There are approximately 15 monks resident at the monastery. The monks are very secretive about the brewing process, and the brewery is not open to the public, therefore much of the information publicly known about the brewery comes from only a few sources.

A NOTE ON TRAPPIST BEER

Trappist beers must be brewed within the walls of a Trappist abbey, by or under the control of Trappist monks.

The monastic community are responsible for all decisions made regarding the brewery and the beers, and all profits must be directed toward charitable assistance.

In seeking to compete with Pilsner lagers by using very pale malts and Czech, Slovenian or German hops, while retaining ale yeasts, Belgium has created a wide range of aromatic, fruity-tasting, golden specialties.

“Abbey Beer” was originally used for any monastic style beer. After introduction of an official Trappist designation in 1997, it came to mean products similar in style to monastic beers. In 1999, a “Certified Belgian Abbey Beer” logo was introduced to indicate beers brewed under license to an existing or abandoned abbey.

JUST LIKE MARMITE, YOU'LL LOVE IT OR HATE IT!

In the 18th century, a Benedictine monk, Dom Pérignon, accidentally discovered how to make still wine into sparkling. One century later, a Brabant brewer blends different lambics and brings about a spontaneous fermentation in the bottle. The Gueuze is born.

A NOTE ON SAISON BEERS

Originally this was a seasonal beer brewed in spring to last through summer and into autumn. Therefore it had to be durable and refreshing. This was difficult before refrigeration, so extra hops were added for preservation.

Large bottles are perfect for sharing with other beer lovers. We have a continually changing supply of these, please ask a member of the team what we have in stock, or check the blackboards
